ADAMS CENTRAL SCHOOL

MONROE
INDIANA 46772

It's August 27 of 1973 and the shrill bells once more welcome us, the 1,023 students and 79 teachers of Adams Central School. Days of barefooted capers and unannounced trips to the lake fade into memories as we regretfully gaze ahead to classes and homework. The Jet Grill in downtown Monroe appears deserted until after 3:00 P.M., when A.C.'s little people invade its quarters. Thoughts of a golden carpet of wheat without a footprint, those little black buggies and windmills dotting the horizon, and the huge, roaring combines cannot be hastily repressed as we sit in class, peering out into the bright sunshine. As we anticipate renewing old friendships and meeting new teachers, we realize that somehow, sometime, we're going to make it happen!

Above: Mournful juniors present a skit at the homecoming pep session.

Her feelings about returning to school for another year evident, senior Jean Gilbert changes her schedule during registration.

Right: Mrs. Sprunger helps her first grade students to improve their reading skills.

The library workroom provides an excellent study room for juniors Diane Weisman, Mary Amstutz, and Darryl Gerber.

Art teacher, Miss Mazelin, helps several grade school children, Jim Isch and Rhonda Byerly, with their special projects.

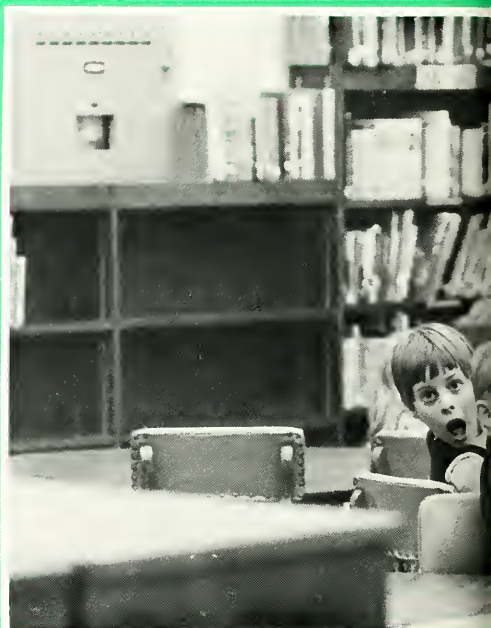

As we glance about, familiar surroundings comfort all but the unaccustomed. Gazing, their eyes wide with wonder, they grasp for security. Their private little worlds now fit into our one big family at Adams Central. Pre-school round-ups, mid-day naps, operettas, and third grade trips to the circus are just the first steps to growing into our family. Suddenly, we find ourselves lost in the fury of changing classes and trying to understand the modular system. Fan bus dating becomes very popular as does noontime rendezvous. With passing years comes the glamorous teens! Halloween TPing, driver's licenses, parties, proms, and of course the ultimate, graduation, make it all seem worthwhile. That's us at A.C., each in our own way makin' it happen!

Art class provides a pleasant deviation from the strains of other classes for Carrie Liby

$$1 + 1 = 2$$

The fun of jumping rope, the delight of playing tag, and thrill of learning to spell our first words are only preludes to growing up at A.C. Who can forget the sensation of going to our first varsity ball game? And we'll always remember our crushes on those big handsome athletes. At A.C., grade school is a time for twirling lessons, swimming lessons, and little league. We'll soon outgrow these childhood excitements, but for now, we're beginning to make it happen!

“How do I have to do it?” asks Maria E. Lopez innocently.

Left: These elementary students learn to read by one of their many reading centers.

Upon our arrival the first day of school, we each received our own desks and proudly put in our shiny new notebooks and brightly colored pencils. Then our teacher passed out all of our big, bulky books, and we placed them neatly in our desks.

Recesses came and went, but not without an occasional sparkly rock or colorful leaf added to our growing collection of paraphernalia in our desks.

Vacations went by and new discoveries came with us back to school to be used at show-and-tell and then to be stuffed in our already cluttered desks.

Along with sunny spring days and sandals come the ending pages of our books. On the last day of school, teachers collect the worn books and we begin the task of cleaning out our messy desks. As the battered notebooks and stubby pencils reappear from our once-tidy desks, shouts of joy and screams of surprise fill the room. A lost library book, old papers, and crunched leaves are found along with forgotten rocks and pictures. Happy smiles transform faces as we find what has accumulated over the past nine months of school.

Those socks never seem to stay up! Ann Marie Nussbaum takes time out from her busy schedule to make major repairs.

Desks provide room for more than just books

In gym class, obstacle course rings provide a challenge for many grade school students.

Jeff Kaehr watches Danielle Ross and Lynette Rodgers indulge in some friendly fun during recess.

My favorite time is recess when all of us go outside and play! We all love to swing and play hopscotch. Monkey-bars are ideal places to turn sommersaults or just hang upside down looking at a topsy-turvy playground.

Sometimes the boys form teams and play kickball while the girls jump rope. Othertimes, both the boys and the girls play tag together.

In the winter, if there is snow on the ground, we make snowmen or have snow battles. But when the snow melts the pavement can get all slushy.

Spring is my favorite season for recesses. Without our bulky coats it's lots easier to run and play. Once in a while, it's fun to mess in mud puddles, too!

A bandaged hand doesn't stop Danny Elzey as he and Gina Little experiment with their pink.

First graders combine fun with learning when Mrs. Sprunger shows them how the post office is run.

Recesses provide breaks for Grade Schoolers

Wait on me! Lynn Weiland doesn't really mind if putting on her boots slows her down.

Recesses are perfect times to pass out valentines. Suzette Parson and Todd Landrum keep an eye on their valentine box.

Ready to answer Mrs. Glentzer's question, Twila Gerber raises her hand.

Grade school life highlighted with special activities

Working, playing and listening are all parts of grade school education.

Mischievous grins lighting their faces. Jeff Kaehr and Kristi Ehrman work on their special activities.

Mrs. Schaadt instructs her fifth grade students on a new math technique.

"Did he kiss her yet?" These famous words ring throughout the Middle School fanbus during the whole ride home. Slowly, watchful eyes peek over the seat. Then, satisfied, they return back to their own area. Now, even though we haven't any recesses and are confused with changing classes, we find plenty of diversions to occupy our spare time. As sixth graders ask about modules, experienced eighth graders roll their eyes in disgust. We think it's rough having twelve grades in one building. But, what would we do without the high school kids to bug, and the grade school kids to drive us crazy? It's fun, because we're trying to make it happen!

Left: Study hall presents an excellent opportunity for seventh graders to catch up on their homework and reading.

Gym fun accompanies Middle School's noon hour

Playing hockey is just one of the many activities that Middle School people partake in during their noon hour.

Noon hour provides not only time for relaxation from class, but relaxation with a special friend.

Noon hour in the gym boasts a lot of energy spent. With all the mental strain of the morning, noontime provides a way of letting ourselves go. Basketball, gymnastic equipment, the peg board, volleyball, and just horsing around fill the list of different activities that go on during this time. Why is noon hour a favorite among we middle school students? Because it requires NO studying!

If rough play begins, a teacher is always there to give a lending hand.

If you don't have sneakers, stocking feet will do just as good. Soon it's time to hit the books again and the work shoes are put back on.

"Let's follow that cute boy over there!"

Since the band room is a long way off for middle school students, a good two minute head start is necessary. Melissa Wilson and Nikki Brock begin their "journey".

Teresa Taylor and Cindy Pierce enjoy each others company while Jenny Sauers has her mind elsewhere.

Barry Williamson finds out that rubbish piles up as he tries to clean up his locker for inspection.

Dawn Gerig and Julie Speakman find a few spare moments to chat before the next class.

Annette Feasel places the last remaining stitches on her beanbag frog.

Bumper to bumper traffic is common at noontime break. Mr. Glass finds out the hard way that no one pays attention to signal lights.

Hungry students dispose of gnawing appetites by purchasing additional food.

Locker conversation is an important part of each middle school day.

The Middle School Office provides a place for relaxation for Mr. McIntosh, Mr. Glass, and Mr. Chronister.

Mr. Glass is doing his thing — yep, he's lecturing.

Guess what happened in history? Several sixth grade girls share the latest news as they congregate beside their lockers.

What would middle school life be without lockers? Not only are they a convenient wastebasket, but also a very clever way of playing a joke. Sharing a locker means the same as sharing a room. Somehow the "lockermates" draw a dotted line as to which belongs to whom. Lockers also spawn very exciting conversations as, "Why did you put those drippy boots on my theme?" or, "Why did I deserve a crashing blow of books from a set locker?" But wait until high school. Then there will be no locker partners, drippy boots, or books in the face because we'll have our own private locker.

Adams Central School Board keeps corporation running smoothly

On the first Tuesday evening of each month, the seven members of the Adams Central School Board forsake families and any other plans to attend at least a five-hour meeting. Sometimes harshly criticized for their actions, the board and Mr. Kenneth Payne spend up to seven hours a night discussing often boring events and facts. They don't receive any overtime pay for the additional hours put in between the regular monthly meetings. Where to buy the water softener, how to resurface the football field, where to purchase the lunch room food, when to cancel school, who to hire for the next coach, how to pay the electric bill, how to recarpet the first grade room, who to hire and who to fire: these are just a few of the many trivial and important decisions that the board must render. Often the butt of misplaced blame, the board, after much research and works, attempts to make the best decision for everyone.

Talking of the mornings activities, several seniors make the lecture area a convenient noon-hour hangout.

Junior Denise Barr makes use of her I.S. time by catching up on some extracurricular new.

Dan Ross puts forth a final burst of speed as he reaches the end stretch.

Hurriedly decorating sectional halls, tiredly selling magazines, anxiously working on prom decorations, spinningly turning 360's in the parking lot, desperately pondering thoughts of who to ask to the SSS banquet; we all share the victories and disappointments of our high school days. Withheld from the freshmen, the I.S. program continues after several threats and pleas from the administration. A few car pools are evidence of a gas shortage not really felt. Mr. Fred Hilbert, our new principal, helps begin everyone's day a little better by ending morning announcements with "have a good day." Brought low during defeats and lifted up during victories, school spirit dwindles with the seniors while it surges forward with the freshmen. Seniors wonder about "those silly freshmen" while juniors and sophomores merely drift along in the middle of their high school years. Each class has its own individuality, but together, we make it happen!

"I don't believe it!" Those were Deb Johnson's words when the announcement was made that she has been voted Homecoming Queen by the A.C. High School students. At a ceremony before the game Senior queen candidates, Deb, Shari Arnold, Renee Bobout, and Debbie Christman, and the Junior members of the court, Bev Braden, Lori Jackson, and Nan Yost, were escorted to the stage by Jet players. Jennifer Call carried roses for the queen and Jimmy Collins was the crown bearer. During the Homecoming parade, it was learned that the Seniors' float took 3rd place, the Juniors' came in 2nd, while the winning float was the Sophomores' elephant. The theme this year was "Remember When . . ." and Sophomore ingenuity turned this into the "Don't Forget-Remember Win!" The A.C. varsity capped the evening with a thrilling, down-to-the-last-second game, losing to winning Churubusco by only one point: 13-12. "I don't believe it" were also the words many used to describe "Remember When . . ." day at A.C. during Homecoming week. In the spirit of nostalgia, high school students dressed the way teenagers of a few years ago did. Friday of Homecoming week brought the celebration of the completion of the floats. A parade and pep session were held in the afternoon.

Hard work and a vivid imagination paid off for the sophomores as they won first place in the float contest.

The cafeteria provides the setting for various school activities, such as the SSS Daddy Date Night.

Angie Geyer entertains her friends and their grampas at the first Gramp's Night.

An exciting fun-filled evening is initiated when Mrs. Elroy Nussbaum lights the candles.

The ringing of money accompanies the ring of the cash register as Jerry Braun pays for his Thursday lunch.

It's finally 11:00 and the growl in our stomachs is about to overcome us. We fight our way through the flow of other starving students and go to the cafeteria. Half way down the hall we can see the line already beginning to form. Our eyes fall on Mr. Hillert watching over things; this dispels any ideas of making our way to the front of the line. So we wait. Finally, we receive our small daily ration. We hand over to pick up our milk from the cooler and run our hands through the whipped cream on our pie. Looking around, to see if anyone noticed, we don't feel so bad because the person in front of us realizes that he forgot his money. Licking off the cream, we walk on, boldly, searching through the splashes of people for a place large enough to seat all of us. This isn't easy if the whole gang is along. We spot a place that, with a little arrangement of chairs, will suffice. Although the food is cold and we have to duck flying peas and jelly, we manage to eat. Although it all sounds so savage, we return to the cafeteria each day with a pit in our stomachs and our feet in our mouths.

You're kidding! You didn't really cut off your finger, did you?

Joys, sorrows, triumphs, defeats, fears, dreams, and memories are all shared by the people of A.C. as we try to get to know each other. The thoughts and feelings of everybody are reflected in facial expressions. You can almost read someone's mind by studying his face. You might see: Happiness ... "Look at the score! We won!"

Anguish ... "not another D!"

Disappointment ... "He won't take me to the Sunshine Banquet."

Satisfaction ... "The hall decorations look fine."

Surprise ... "A birthday party for me in the middle of the lunchroom?"

Hope ... "Maybe I'll make the Honor Roll."

Nostalgia ... "Remember when we first saw 'The Wizard of Oz'? We were so scared!"

Embarrassment ... "Only one car in the parking lot and I hit it."

Relief ... "Thank goodness it's Friday!!"

Boredom ... "I don't care what x equals."

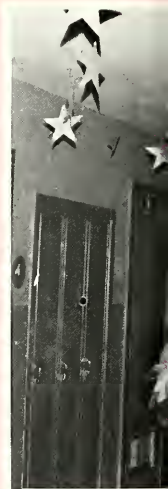

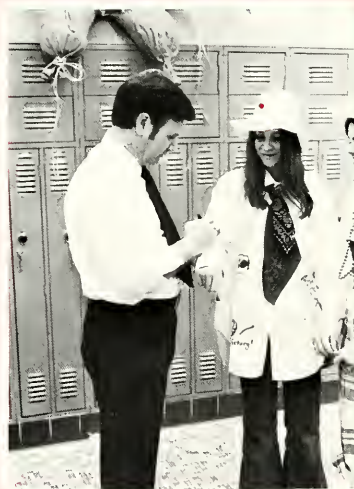

No matter what the face describes about the person, you're sure to gain some insight into the problems and wishes of the individual through his own unique expressions.

Spirit reaches climax during sectional preparation

Stepping inside the school, a feeling of excitement and pride engulfs our minds. Monstrous signs, flashy posters, and original decorations have converted the customary humdrum hallway into jubilant corridors. We students demonstrate enthusiasm and support for our Jets by attiring ourselves in clashing outfits, tennies, and white shirts covered with catchy slogans and numerous signatures. Excitement mounts as the day continues and the entire school involves itself. Classes become disrupted while students and teachers take time out to autograph each other's shirts. Our boys' and girls' pep clubs hold a joint meeting to rehearse some newly constructed yells. Confirming our school spirit, we utilize our vocal chords to their fullest degree at the outset of the game. Although the final outcome shows Bellmont over us, we dejectedly depart from the Bluffton gym.

A.C.'s seniors show their support for the team with their winning Sectional hall.

I.S. program stresses student responsibility

My day at Adams Central is divided into time spent in class and time spent on independent study. Since I am not strictly scheduled into any particular area during my IS, I can use any number of the many facilities that have been made available to students in our school.

The library, with its micro-reader, microfiche, dial access, closed circuit TV, and research materials, provides me with an almost unlimited fund of knowledge. I can study magazines from past years, read the books of well known authors, or keep posted on current affairs.

When I just feel like talking, empty rooms can be utilized as talk areas for my friends and me.

Because of another facet of the IS program, I am free at various times during the day to pursue activities not directly related to classwork. I can work on special projects in just about anything and get credit for it.

For a break in my schedule, I can take time to go to the commons for a coke and a chance to relax with some friends.

I.S. time is a perfect time to get acquainted with that special person.

When goofing around in the commons area becomes old stuff, and the halls are empty of friends, try researching on that 12-page term paper due tomorrow.

The lecture area provides a great place to just sit down to relax and rap about the day's happenings.

1. Old Chiang Saying "He who lets friend soak his head in a john, needs another dunking."
2. TV production class made a big hit at noontime by producing variety show. Interviews with various teachers, news, commercials, and game shows filled the 11:30-12:00 slot.

- 3 Debbie Christianer sings to a popular song for her Speech "mouthings" assignment.
- 4 When not pushing gadgets or screwing up the tapes, Joe Baker and Roland Conrad struggle to get some last minute homework done.

As the hoards of people press us on every side, we vow to go to our next class before the module break even though it's considered illegal within the realms of Adams Central. More people stream into the hallway from more doorways, and we wonder how many the walls can hold. As teachers close their doors to try to keep out some of the noise, the mob comes to a halt and we find ourselves in the midst of a human traffic jam. As we stand and anticipate the reaction of our teacher when we're late to our next class, someone in the back gives the whole crowd a push. As people yell, more drop their books.

After waiting an eternity, we decide to take a look and discover that all this time, we have been waiting in the line to get to the water fountain. After we fight our way through the rest of the mob, we sigh in relief only to find that we're stuck behind a couple who are acting like they've just begun to go steady.

Finally, we reach our destination, only to find we must undertake an obstacle course to get in the classroom. With heads down and faces blushing, we mutter "excuse me" at least three times and charge through clasped hands and whispered lovelies.

As we drop into our seats exhausted, we hear a booming voice. "Do you have a good explanation for being late . . .?"

Dave Bertsch and Jan Beery take advantage of an empty hallway between classes.

Juniors host "seasons, in the sun" all-night prom

On Saturday evening, May 4, couples attending the Jr.-Sr. Prom crossed over a black, iron-rod bridge into ecstasy as a stream trickled off to their left. The evening embarked with a flash as Lawrence Anspaugh photographed the individual couples. During the banquet Chester Longenberger played popular selections as the couples enjoyed candlelight dining under a starless sky of blue crepe paper. The theme, Season in the Sun, was further elaborated on with flowering trees, a wishing well, and mushrooms.

migrated to the gym to dance to the music of The Cornerstone. As numerous couples joined in the slow dances and the boogying, others took advantage of the game room.

At 12:30 the couples (reunited) went to Cinema I, Southtown in Fort Wayne, to see Shamus starring Burt Reynolds, not the ordinary private detective. Three o'clock and a great number still going strong bowled for two striking hours with used bowling pins, candy bars, and cokes given away every ten minutes.

For those bright-eyed few who seemed to never run out of energy, there were some breakfasts in homes. As they were stepping across the threshold of enchantment at A.C., the juniors who worked night after night painting the mural, making centerpieces and flowers, carrying in bricks and cement blocks for the stream, and making the final arrangements all agreed that their tiring and time-consuming efforts had been very worthwhile, successful, and rewarding.

Post Banquet entertainment was provided by Moment, Foxx and Ash.

Pranks: pigeons . . . paintings . . . fire extinguishers . . . graduation?

"Put your back against the wall, please. Stand straight and tall . . . thank you. Now let me measure your head. OK. Next person please." and the voice droned on as we were measured for our caps and gowns. Before long, announcements arrived. We scurried around in government class, trading name cards. The last few weeks of school, memory books appeared and we wrote segments of our lives together. Then came the day when we placed all the invitations in envelopes and then wondered if we'd remembered to put in a name card. The last Saturday before graduation our class piled onto school buses and headed for King's Island. After a long day of fun and excitement, we returned home, exhausted.

On the morning of our last day of school, we seniors met for breakfast. Sunday afternoon, May 19, we gathered together as the class of "74" for the last time at our commencement.

Our class valedictorian, Sonja Poorman, addressed the students, parents, and teachers. It was a very solemn moment as we moved our tassels to the left side of our caps, signifying that we were graduates of Adams Central High School.

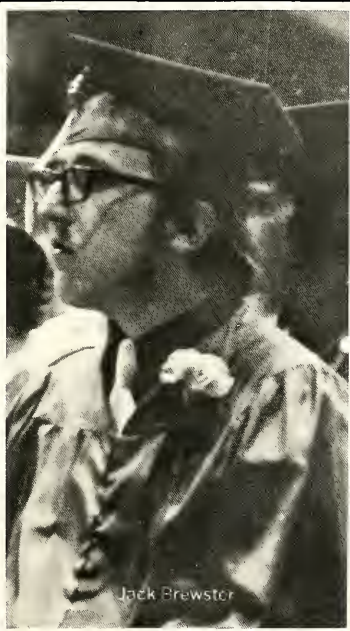

After twelve years of anticipation, Nyla Engle receives her diploma.

Individual progress: key to Science success

Freshmen biology students Sue Soldner, Rhonda Rutledge, and Kathy Strahm eagerly delve into a new mini-course.

Carrolls and tapes surrounded the students while they studied their science. Those who wished could consume many hours of I.S. time by working on a project. Darryl Gerber won top honors for his chemistry project at the Fort Wayne Regional Science Fair by putting forth much effort.

Biology students used dissection as a means of learning more about the systems of different species. Chemistry experiments turned many a normal pupil into a mad scientist as they mixed and titrated unknown substances. Individual projects allowed the bio-chem students to research and experiment on their own. The speed of sound and light was explored more fully by the physics class. This variety of teaching techniques allowed the students to learn at their own pace.

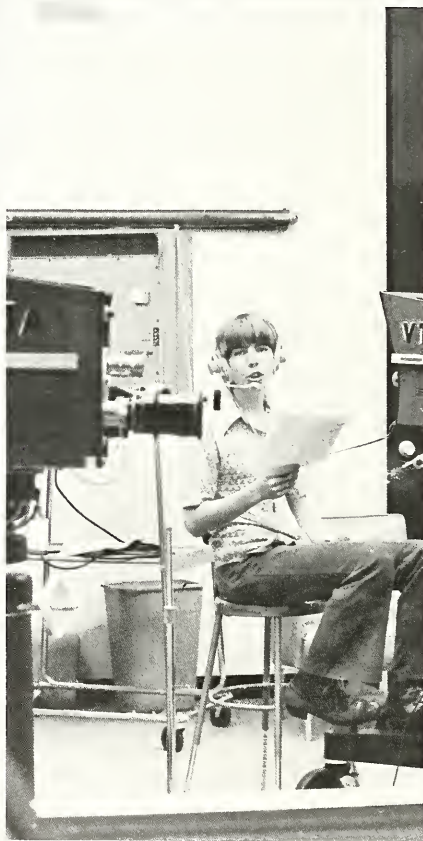

Nedra Sprunger and Melinda Caudle learn about frogs from the inside out.

"It wasn't supposed to smoke like that!" Bev Braden is surprised by the reaction of her chemistry experiment.

There are no hidden tapes in our A-V Center!

Did you know that the boys in the A-V Center do more than sitting around pushing buttons all day? Why, after watching "Sesame Street" in the morning, they get down to the serious business of running the A.C. Electronics Center. The noon hours are filled with broadcasting the A.C. TV Production Class Show. The Electronics Club visited WANE TV Station in Fort Wayne and they watched how the pros push the buttons. So now you might call our A-V boys the "professional A.C. broadcasters." Oh well, as long as they push the right buttons.

Jet Stream staff streaks through year with bi-weekly editions

Frantically meeting deadlines by writing stories, reporting school events, taking pictures, and typing copy, the Jet Stream staff had a busy year. Always surrounded by pretzels, cookies, Pepsi, colorful cartoons, cards, and games in the "pit", the students who worked on the A.C. newspaper learned the tricks of the trade from their friend and sponsor, Mrs. Grove (Mom). This year, the staff financed the issues by selling ads to various businesses in the surrounding area. Highlights of the year included the Christmas, Valentine's Day, Sectional, April Fool's Day, and Senior editions.

Forty-eight new links added to Sunshine chain

The Sunshine Banquet became a reality when couples had their pictures taken and then found their places at the tables.

As fund-raising raked in the money, the Sunshine Society dished out the activities. An added attraction, Gramp's Night, made a big hit as the girls brought their grandpas instead of grandmas.

Moppet murals and a candle light dinner wistfully enhanced the theme, "Love and Fancy Free" at the Sunshine Banquet Night. The Ladies' Tea also highlighted the year as secrets and surprises were revealed.

Senior Breakfast opened the emotions inside each Senior Sunshine Girl when every one received a rose and all gathered to sing the Sunshine Song.

Adams Central added German to its foreign language department this year and hired an enthusiastic young teacher to get the program off to a booming start. Miss Kambs taught the essentials of German while adding intriguing and fun experiences along the way. The German Club's Christmas festivities included caroling at Swiss Village and at the Adams County Home, eating German cookies and pastries, and playing German games. Later in the year the students visited the Heidelberg Inn in Huntington for a complete German meal including sauerbraten, red cabbage and potato pancakes. Finishing off the year with a great success, the German skit presented at Ball State University's Foreign Language Day won first place. It looks like German is here at A.C. to stay!

Graveyard stories haunt Spanish classes.

"Hola estudiantes!" is a familiar phrase to all the Spanish students, and that is the way the day's class is started. Once in class, the students conjugate verbs, write paragraphs, and listen to tapes of stories of haunted houses and ghost-ridden graveyards.

A new experience for the older Spanish students began when they started helping teach the migrant children. Although these children stayed only six weeks, the students benefited from them greatly.

The last nine weeks of school we had a fantastic student teacher from Ball State. Miss Cindy Ziegler worked with the Spanish and French students as her final test for her teaching degree.

Then on March 22, the Spanish Club held its annual party in the gym. The party started with Spanish refreshments and continued with many skits. Scott Kohne starred as a ballerina in "If I were not a student."

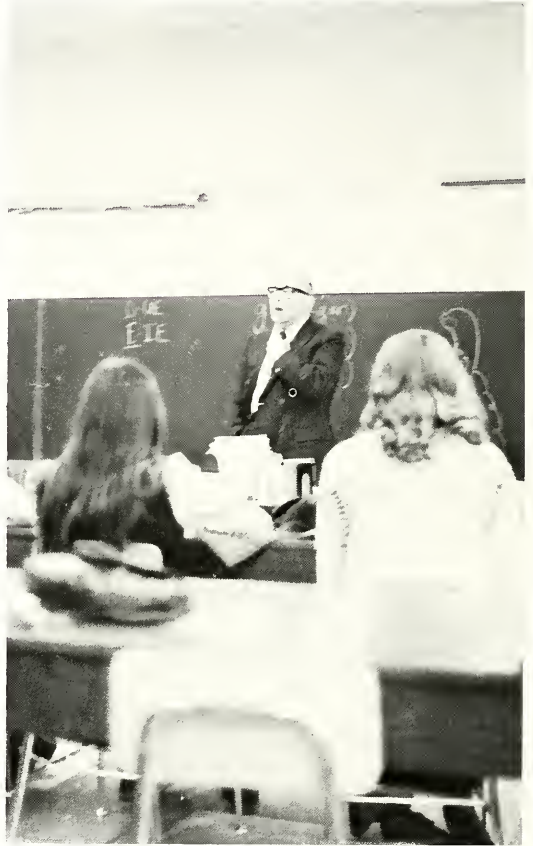

As a finale, the Spanish Club hosted a party for retiring teacher, Miss Williamson.

Mr. Stumoff, teacher of World History, is making an important fact during one of his lectures.

"Learning by doing" was the theme of the Home Ec classes. Books, stoves, and sewing machines were essential tools in this learning.

In the unit of consumer education, the freshmen made and viewed advertisements. The sophomores planned a party for their little brothers and sisters plus other children while studying about child care. The field of foreign foods was explored by the junior class. Oral reports of different countries gave the background for a foreign dish that was prepared. Also, a wassail enlightened the Christmas time for the teachers. Bridal scrapbooks and future plans were put together by the senior class to get a foreview of how that special day should be planned. For fun, a cookout was held in honor of the senior Home Ec class. Handy knowledge from experience in the Home Ec department will prove useful for that future homemaker.

Erasers and chalk dust lined the blackboards from constant use in each of the math rooms. Pencils were also in motion while students crammed to get their homework in on time.

To relate Math to everyday life, a number of methods were used. In general math, students learned how to figure their income taxes and filled out the proper forms. The metric system was also introduced to a greater extent in that booths set up around the room contained different practice sets for the students to experiment with. In geometry, constructions were neatly made on typing paper and displayed on bulletin boards around the room. In the advanced classes, fundamentals were discussed to a greater degree. Lectures, multiplied by learning, plus homework for drilling, equaled a better understanding of math.

Industrial Arts: Backbone of Vocational Training

The Adams Central Industrial Arts Department contains three major divisions: shop, drafting, and printing.

In the shop, students learn the use and operation of various machines, the lathe and welder, for instance. Each student is expected to complete a specific number of projects on which he will be graded. Then, in spare time, students may do mechanical work on their cars or cycles. Many students become good mechanics with the basic knowledge they learn in shop.

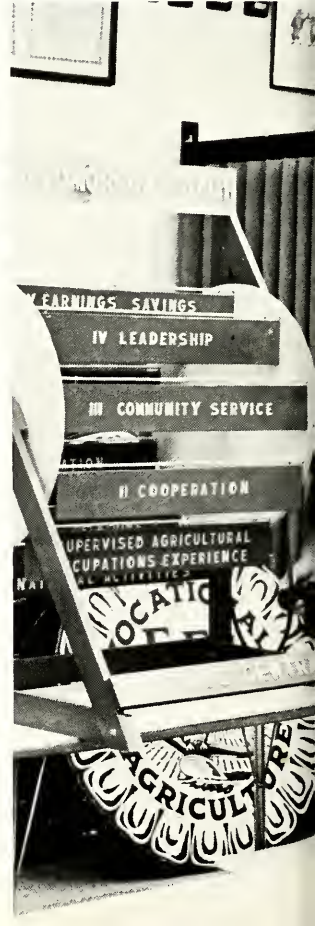

In the drafting room, students learn to design and draw objects where precision really counts.

In the printing room, tickets, programs, and some office papers are printed at a savings to the school. (Unfortunately, the department has yet been unable to print US currency.)

Watson Era in FFA ends

Under the leadership of Mr. Watson and Mr. Hayworth, the Adams Central FFA completed a very active and successful year. In judging contests the chapter continually placed first in Crops, Poultry, Dairy, Livestock, and Soils Divisions. Five FFA members, Ron Johnson, Tom Liechty, Joe Baker, Merlin Nussbaum, and Rick Fiechter, received State Farmer degrees.

The chapter has been active in many community, district, and state activities. In November the FFA co-sponsored a Box Social with the Sunshine Society. After the traditional Thanksgiving program, FFA members delivered food baskets to needy families in the county. Selling rat bait proved to be a prosperous fund-raising project and one noticeable improvement to the schoolgrounds was the erection of an FFA sign on the west side of the school, welcoming visitors to Adams Central and the Monroe community. FFA members and their families concluded the year by attending the annual FFA banquet.

Collins initiates "Yes, sir!" to AC Band

"The beat of the drums, the white plumes bobbing back and forth, the rhythmic motion of everyone's feet — left, right, left, right — excitement and anticipation fill the air as we pass the judges' stand. Will we win?"

These were the feelings of many Jet Band members at the various parades in which they competed for trophies. After marching season, Concert Band hosted a visiting band from Knox, Ohio; Concert Band also presented concerts of their own. Adding spirit to basketball games, the Pep Band played rousing tunes and even provided music for the "AC Can-can Line." Practicing before school in the morning, Stage Band prepared popular tunes for the Pops Concert.

The best way to sum up this year in the Band Department would be to quote Mr. Collins and the Jet Band members: "Do you love band?"

"Yes, sir!"

The faces of A.C. football reflect excitement, agony, and hysteria.

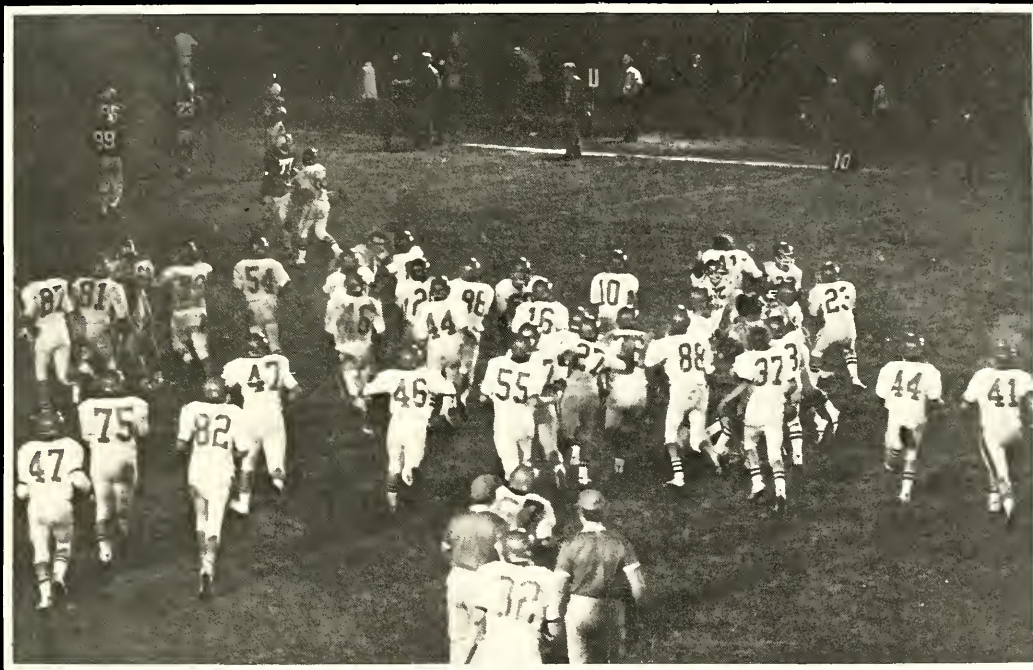

Looking at the past season, our won-loss record (3-7) does not describe the caliber of our team. Unfortunate injuries to some key people and a tough schedule kept us just a fraction away from victory in many games.

Mr. Doug Huffman took over as head coach when Mr. Fred Hilbert accepted the high school principal position. Coach Huffman was proud of the fierce competitive spirit shown by the team. Individual awards were: Most valuable player . . . Ron Myers. Most valuable off. lineman . . . Doug Moser. Most valuable def. lineman . . . Gene Gilgen. Most valuable off. back . . . Ron Myers. Most valuable def. back . . . Jim Arnold. All-conference . . . Jim Arnold, Gene Gilgen. Co-captains . . . Ron Myers, Lynn Stucky, Gene Gilgen.

Mr. Huffman stated, "I believe that the team can be proud of their efforts, even though the won-loss record doesn't show a winning season. Our opponents can testify to the fact that we were a tough team to play against. I feel grateful to the seniors for the respect and loyalty they gave me in my first year as head coach and I'm sure their toughness on the field will help them be strong in life."

Warm-ups are a part of every pre-game activities.

The Reserve Football team made a good showing and gave us hope for a good varsity season next year. They won four out of seven games and tied one game with South Adams where no points were scored.

Mr. Carr, the reserve coach, commented proudly that they were very dedicated players and will do very well in the future.

Even though the final scores were close, the Freshman season was not a very productive one. Looking toward next season, Coach Walsh believes that the new intra-mural Junior High program should make football at A.C. the # 1 winning sport, even though competition is of a high caliber.

Coach Humble shouts words of encouragement to his matsmen.

For the first time, the ACAC Wrestling Tournament was held at Adams Central, with our boys finishing third out of six teams. Another first, the Adams Central Reserve Invitational, pitted four reserve teams against each other, our reserve taking second place.

Co-captains Derryl Aschliman, Dan Gremaux, and Doug Moser played a big part in this year's victories. Derryl, along with Rick Fiechter, won second place in the sectional and the right to go to the regional. He also won the honor of being named "Baguba of the Year."

Dan Gremaux is a four year letterman who has wrestled in every varsity AC match ever held. Dan also holds the over-all record for the most wins, most pins, and most take-downs.

Doug Moser, also a four-year letterman, participated in a wrestling camp at Bloomington last summer. His regular season record was 10-2.

Wrestling has now been at Adams Central for four years; all four years having winning seasons. Coach Humble summed up this season as the best he'd ever had. Although he is losing seven seniors, he looks forward to a good season next year as a lot of experienced boys are returning.

Although the Adams Central basketball team posted only a 5-13 record, many of its losses were by close scores, including a close loss to Leo after six overtimes.

Lending a hand to the team were Randy Landis, named to the ACAC All Conference First Team, and Jim Arnold, named to the Sectional First Team. The Jets will lose these two senior boys and three others: Dave Adler, Randy Nussbaum, and Lynn Stucky.

Possibly the hardest blow to next year's team will be the loss of Coach Jo "Hobby" Gibbs. Mr. Gibbs resigned unexpectedly from the post of head coach after three seasons with the team.

The year was a bittersweet one for the high school rifle team. As the defending 1972-73 Tri-County Marksmanship Association Champions, the riflemen began the season with only one returning starter, but by the end of the year, the team was tied for third place with a record of 6-6, then lost the tie breaker to Belmont in the league shoot-off in Fort Wayne. Earlier during the winter, the riflemen were more successful and won first place in the Prone Team-Scholastic Non-Military event, and individual honors at the NRA State Junior Tournament at Culver Military Academy.

Ron Ross displays good fielding position.

Jets advance to sectional finals

Lynn Stucky takes a wicked cut at the ball.

Bill Haugk's aggressive play scores another run.

Senior Jim Arnold exhibits the batting-eye that made him a dependable hitter.

All conference first baseman Ron Ross slides home for another Jet score.

The Adams Central Baseball Team finished the regular season play with an 8-4 record. The team started off in fine fashion with a shut-out against Winchester and one against Homestead in the first game of a double-header. In the 4-way Tourney, the Jets beat Eastside, then lost to Heritage to clinch second place. Perhaps the highlight of the season came in the sectional. In the first game the Jets defeated Huntington North, ranked 15th in the state, by a score of 3-1. The Jets then went on to beat Bellmont in the second game 7-4, but lost in the championship game to Wayne, finishing second out of eight teams.

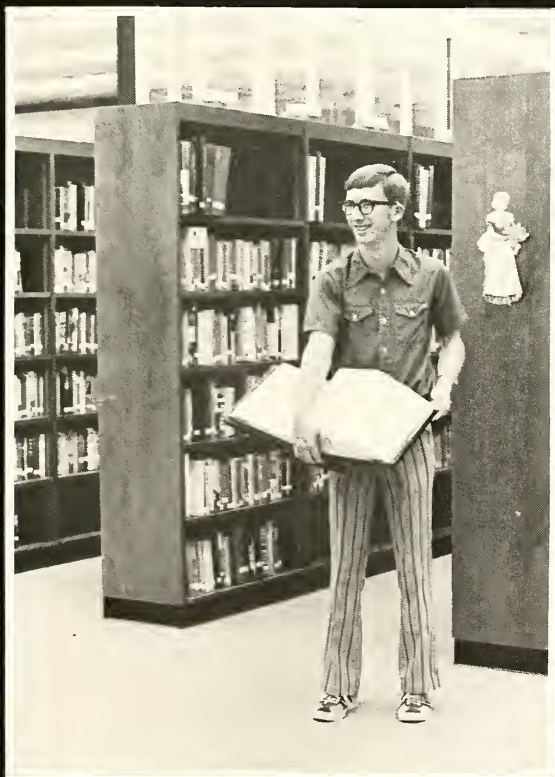

Before school, students and teachers alike cluster together in the hallways to chew the fat about the day's happenings.

Sue Bollenbacher portrays a homecoming sweetie of the '50's.

ALBUM

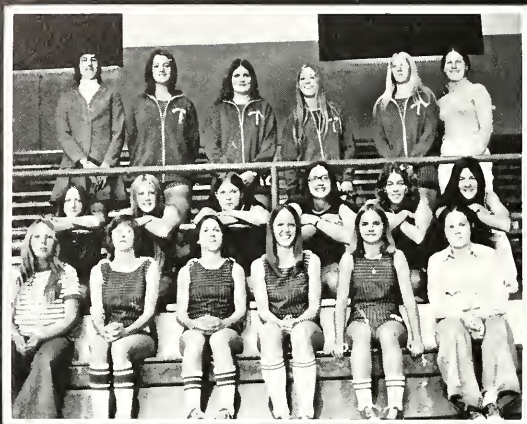

Serious thoughts plague Renee Rebout's mind at her last band performance.

Webster can be proud of Miles Johnson as he attempts to enlarge his vocabulary.

Mr. Steiner calls for Mrs. Stucky as Mrs. Fruechte and Greg Braun get a little rowdy in the library.

"Remember When" day activates nostalgic feelings as Melanie Bowen and Brenda Lyons don themselves in a 1960's costume.

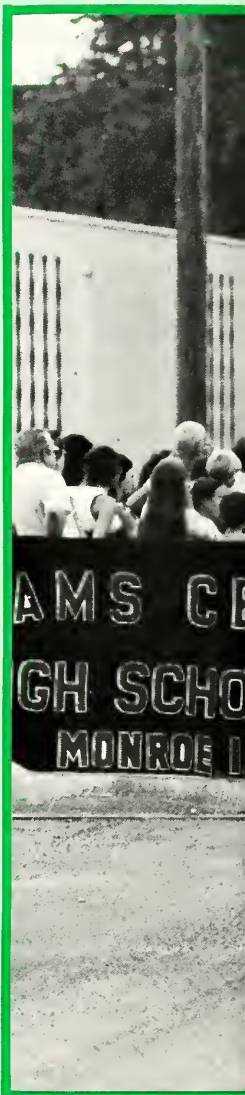

Making a float is not all "huff-and-puff" since a float is composed mostly of paper flowers. Trina Bluhm sits quietly on the freshman float as she makes a supply of Kleenex flowers.

Banner carrier Barb Manley endures the heat as she parades through Monroe in the July 4-H parade.

The Linn Grove Park catches the eye as a place of relaxation. People come in trucks, cars, and steam engines to enjoy themselves and to get a glimpse of the scenery.

$$ + $ = \text{PROFIT}$

Drum Major Ed Steffen and banner carrier Denise Welker lead the Adams Central High School Band through Monroe during the Adams County 4-H Fair parade.

The hush of the early morning, the tingle of cold January air, the sunset behind the woods, the smell of your neighbor's pigs, the moo of his cows; these are just a few advantages of living in a farm community. When grain prices go down, almost everyone hurts; when they pop up again, farmers smile. Working during the week only makes a weekend night driving around town seem more exciting. The gas shortage doesn't seem to be pinching too much when, after the Friday night ballgame, kids fill the Pizza King or Burger Chef. Our community, its businesses and people have molded our lives. And they keep teaching us how to make it happen!

The first settlers, other than Indians, came to this area of Indiana in 1820. When the area was officially organized in 1836 as Adams County, a base for the county seat was necessary. Since the place now known as Monroe was exactly in the center of the county, it seemed the logical location. However, because of the extreme swampiness of the place, a town could not be built there. Therefore, Decatur became the county seat. The water in the middle of the county later drained away, and Monroe existed as a town in 1847.

Monroe was once the place of business for three physicians and a regularly printed newspaper. Now none of these remain, but many other businesses have been founded in Monroe. For example, there is a liquor store in Monroe now. But it is not the first of its kind. In the nineteenth century Monroe had three saloons.

In 1907 the Monroe State Bank was established. Monroe has had several banks through the years and fortunately no robberies have ever occurred. There was, however, one close call in the 1930's when notorious gangster, John Dillinger, as legend has it, was seen inspecting the bank. But he kindly decided not to take the money of the good, small-town folks.

The population of Monroe has grown to over 700. Besides its stores, Monroe also has three Protestant Churches: the United Methodist, the United Brethren, and the Friends, to serve the community.

Saloon establishes business in Berne

The town of Berne became a reality when the GR and I Railroad needed a station; and Berne seemed to be the ideal spot. Berne, dominated with Swiss Mennonite settlers, had only one street for forty-five years, that being Main Street. The first shop, a one-story shack, was the general store.

Early in Berne's existence, a saloon promoter came to this small village. When asked if a saloon could be built in Berne, the Swiss questioned what a saloon was. They were told that it was a place to eat and drink. Thinking it would be a restaurant, the community was happy at the thought of a saloon. Fights in the saloon soon became so common that a dog fight received more attention.

At one time two banks established businesses in Berne, but the Bank of Berne is the only one remaining.

Bluffton wins honor of being site of county seat

Bluffton is located in Wells County, Indiana, on the banks of the Wabash River about 20 miles from the Indiana-Ohio state line. The name "Bluffton" was suggested by Robert C. Bennett, Senior, because of the town's situation on the more bluff-like side of the river.

After Wells County was set aside as a county unit in 1837, two towns, Bluffton and Murray, began contesting for the honor of being named the county seat. Mr. Smith of Adams County cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of Bluffton.

Once the location of the county seat was decided upon, it became necessary to arrange for a court house. It was decided that it should be located on the west side of Main Street between Market and Wabash streets. It was made of logs hewed square. Its dimensions were 24' by 18'.

In 1845, a fire destroyed the log courthouse. A new courthouse was erected south of the old site. It was built of brick in the Gothic style and was rated one of the finest buildings in smaller towns of Indiana.

The old courthouse became inadequate for the growing business of the county and was condemned in 1886. On August 29, 1889, the cornerstone of the present day courthouse was laid. The cost of the building was $125,000 with $15,000 being spent in addition for furnishings.

Throughout the years, Bluffton has expanded to meet the needs of the community. Every year, the Street Fair brings thousands of visitors.

There is a community consciousness in Bluffton. The Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club, the Rotary and Lions Clubs are active, working organizations; the wide well-kept streets, the lovely homes, the beautiful lawns, the splendid trees that line many of the streets — all of these have earned for Bluffton the name "The Parlor City of Indiana."

as site of public memorials

The city of Decatur was platted in 1836 as the county seat of Adams County. In 1873 the Courthouse was completed at the cost of $90,000. Several public memorials have been erected around the Adams County Courthouse. Among these is the Peace Monument on the southwest corner of the Courthouse lawn. This structure was the first War Memorial in the world to be dedicated to peace.

Through the years Decatur has boasted many interesting businesses and recreational facilities. In the 1870's and 80's the city counted twenty saloons within her borders, and most of them did a thriving business. On October 18, 1906, the

City of Decatur plans for a better tomorrow

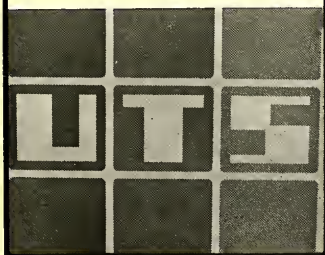

The new addition of the Adams County Memorial Hospital has been completed and is now in use.

The county is presently restoring an old covered bridge, which will be placed in the new park upon it's completion.

New building sites are in the planning stage. Work will begin across from the Decatur Plaza, which was recently just completed.

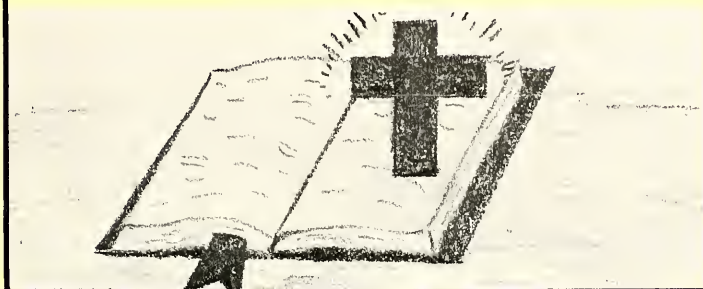

A new Landmark Restaurant and Motel will hopefully be seen in the near future.

Miss Lucille Beavers

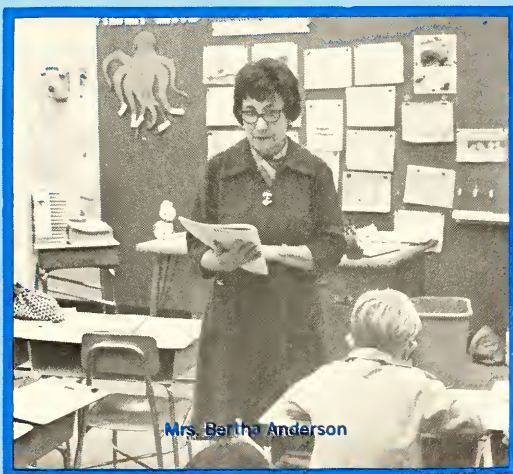

Miss Mary Williamson

Mr. Martin Watson

As the 1973-74 school year comes to a close, the familiar faces of Mrs. Bertha Anderson, Miss Lucille Beavers, Miss Mary Williamson, and Mr. Martin Watson will not be seen next year in the halls of A.C., for they are retiring from their teaching duties. In order to give out knowledge, a teacher must have knowledge to give. These four teachers combined have attended at least two universities and acquired several years experience before coming to A.C. Both Miss Beavers and Mr. Watson have taught here since about the time A.C. was originated. Most of the four teachers have always had the ambition to teach and were encouraged by friends to go into this line of work. Now that these four will have more time on their hands, "doing their own thing" takes priority. Hobbies such as golf, gardening, painting, and reading are at the top of the lists of things to do. Travelling is another activity to be enjoyed more fully. Memorable moments cannot be counted on two hands as each day is filled with different events.

We at A.C. will miss rubbing shoulders with these four teachers. Their daily routine of preparing for a school day, communicating with students, and lending a hand to the seas of knowledge graduates to memories as A.C.'s doors close after an era of love and teaching.

Mrs. Bertha Anderson

Lockers slamming or doors clicking shut; friends yelling or couples whispering to each other; from the sleepy, fuzzy, dismal Monday mornings to the loud, clear Friday afternoons, the sounds of A.C. are quite varied but always present. Mornings begin with the swish of the bus door and the click of its handle. As the radio screeches out the latest hit song from WQOW or WMEE, yelling kids try to be heard above all other noises. More kids stomping onto the bus wake a sleeping senior with "Can I sit here?" As we hurry into school to the tune of the loud warning buzzer, we are greeted with shouted messages or dropped books.

Concentrating on his music, Neil Martin practices "Fueling Banjos."

Struggling for a victory, A.C.'s Mark Mitchell is tackled by a "Busco" player.

Chugging along on his trike, Mr. Potter displays his hidden musical talent.

Gathered in the lecture area, Sandy and Candy Gerber and Julie Cook discuss a test.

Doug Klinger helps with the construction of a Homecoming float.

Typical scenes in the A.C. library often include these casual poses.

Arriving at school, Jodi Isch collects her books for morning classes.

After a hard day's work the bus is a welcome sight.

The library, said to be a place of quietness, offers many diversions to an unattentive studier. The person who sits in the next carol shuffles his feet, producing static electricity, and scrapes his chair on the legs of the carol, causing the whole row to quiver. Turning pages and rumpling papers, the neighbor decides to erase a mistake and shakes the row of carols, producing an odd thumping sound. As we receive snatches of a middle school lesson from the lecture area, the miniature television in the booth across drones on with the most exciting soap opera. Rattling money in pockets reminds us of lunch time, so we end our morning's I.S. and head for the cafeteria. A small rumble of talk welcomes us to the lunchline. A background of clattering plates and cooking food covers up the sounds of dropping silverware and money. The ringing of the cash register brings a response of jingling change. As we near the end of the day, all hopes of accomplishing anything are abandoned. As cars and busses screech and roar out of the parking lot, quietness once more reigns at A.C.

As we once more say goodbye to the "Halls of Central," some of us for only 3 months and some of us forever, the words of this poignant song prick our hearts. For some, these words offer a happy reminder of a fun-filled, but too short, summer. For others, it brings to an end the security, homework, and fun that this school has given. Those of us remaining in school that last week after graduation reflect on those "lucky" seniors with questions of "how many more years do I have?" while those fortunate seniors think of "how fast it all went." We replace books with swimsuits, long bus rides for bicycle trips, days in school with hours on the beach. Of course, our school days can be quickly slipped into our drawer of memories. And within these memories of teachers and friends is the dominant remembrance that whatever, whenever or wherever "it" was, we know that WE MADE IT HAPPEN!
